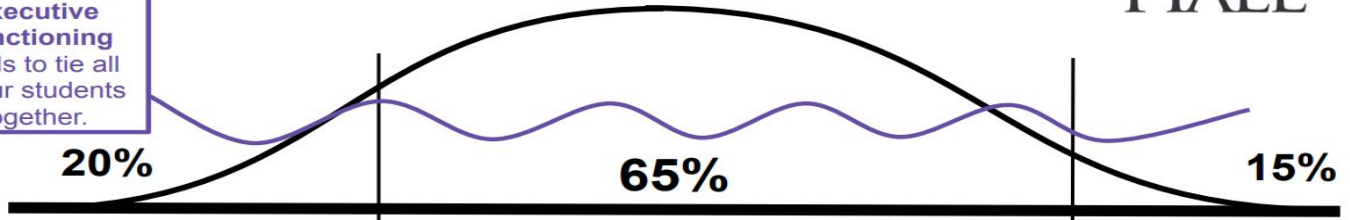
DIAGNOSTIC PROFILE

The thread of challenges with Executive Functioning tends to tie all of our students together.



Student may have a Language Based Learning Difference, ADHD, or issues with Working Memory or Processing Speed.

These tend to be our "Quirky-Compatible" Students, with no readily apparent lagging skills in the areas of Social Cognition or Adaptive Living, but they are choosing an academically and socially supportive start to college

Student may most closely identify with ASD-I or Asperger's (depending on the time of their diagnosis), Social Communication Disorder, NLD, PDD-NOS, or they may have no formal diagnosis at all.

Student will benefit from a Coaching Model as they receive in vivo social support, academic support, independent living skills development, and access to a robust social community - concurrent to engagement in college classes.

Student may self-identify as High Functioning Autism, or even have some traits of ASD-II, but is also socially motivated and has sufficient academic and adaptive living skills to pursue post-secondary education.
